EARS

There are excrescences on the human ear which have been designed and attached, one on each side, to prevent the ear from slipping down too far. Some are an afterthought, while others are impelled far into the bone.

Hardly any two ears look alike. Some are small and some are large. Some are pink as little sea shells, some are lob-sided and are spraddled from the Medulla oblongata to the pneumogastric nerve.

Some ears are dull and lifeless and lie back against the dome devoid of life and animation, while others stand but with verve, quivering with emotion and ready to curl like a whip around the faintest bit of New Stuff.

Some have other missions in life besides acting as bumpers for hats and holders for the hair to train and keep it in place. In early youth they have practically nothing to do in the ear except to be washed. Later they are used for handles whereby the fingers, mothers and teachers can grasp their young. Still later, they are used for absorbing the under-standings of the world and the inane permutability of 1921 synopses. When they reach the collegiate stage, they undergo a strange transformation, and become acute to an amazing degree in all recreational sports. They become veritable axes in the gymnasium, allowing education to be given to shrimpy right through the Eustachian tubes like a spear through an Ethiopian.

Some people have an ear for music while others like saxophones, and some like calliopes. So far as the question of lack of musical appreciation is concerned, all ears look alike. However, the one to which the very question are attached has a way of knowing, or not, ask him or her if he likes the ukulele. He or she says yes, it is one piece of music for capital punishment. Sometimes it happens that the one who ordinarily has no ear for music acquires one after the third or fourth drink. An essay on the value of food oil on one's appreciation of the liberal arts would be worth while. Something entitled "The Backlash, Turn Backs, Oh Turn a Your Flight" or "The Art of Fate" by Eh. Hiram?

Construction of the memorial building was first broached at the session of the legislature two years ago and a committee was named by the legislature to investigate the matter. The legislature voted the committee $10,000 should be spent on the building.

MEMORIAL TABLET FOR SERVICE MEN

(By Associated Press)
SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Jan. 12.—Appropriations for construction of a memorial building in honor of the men who fought in the world war will be considered by the Utah legislature which met here yesterday. Several senators and representatives have stated they believe $1,000,000 should be spent on the building.

ALGIERS, Jan. 12.—"The Drinkers of Sunshine," as the Arab shepherds call themselves in their own language, are on the verge of starvation throughout Algeria and unless wheat is imported from America may have nothing but sunshine as a steady diet during the winter. The threatening famine in Algeria is the result of a long drought. No rain has fallen for a year.

FISH PRODUCTS IN A DECIDED SLUMP

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 12.—Production and consumption of fishery products, stimulated and encouraged by governmental and other agencies as a war measure, have shown a decided slump, according to the bureau of fisheries.

A large under-consumption of fish, advancing prices of labor and material and a curtailment in the export trade, the report says, have placed many fishermen in a serious situation. As the majority of fishermen are small individual producers, who have devoted their lives to their calling, exposed to unusual hardships and dangers, with little or no training for a change of livelihood, the bureau of fisheries says it is important that some measure of relief be afforded them. It is endeavoring to render the industry such aid as it can with the exceedingly limited funds at its disposal.

(By Associated Press)
LONDON, Jan. 12.—A new standard of silver coinage has just been put into effect in the United Kingdom because of the great increase in the value of silver.
